Hyperbaric Oxygen Therapy (HBOT)

Hyperbaric Oxygen therapy (HBOT) is used as an additional therapy. The rationale behind using hyperbaric for Autism Spectrum Disorders is treatments increase cerebral blood flow and thus oxygen is delivered to areas of the brain which are thought to be oxygen deficient. Greater amounts of blood and oxygen begin to stimulate cerebral tissues and aid in recovery of idling neurons. HBOT is also thought to reduce excess fluids and swelling of brain tissues which aid in neurological function and a less confused state in the individual with autism. HBOT can also be used as a complementary therapy for the treatment of heavy metal detox for such materials as mercury, assisting in the metabolism of heavy metal removal. Studies are on-going.
